Valle del Guadalhorce, Almogía

Tucked away in the countryside just outside Almogía, this charming end-of-terrace home (one of only three in the row) is made for quiet, rural living. The ground floor centres on a good-sized living/dining room with a cosy log burner. Double doors open to a fabulous outdoor kitchen-dining area—complete with BBQ, pizza oven and space for long, lazy meals around a large table. You'll also find three bedrooms, a shower room with walk-in shower, and a generous country kitchen with freestanding dressers and units. Accessed via external stairs, the upper level offers two versatile rooms. Currently used as storage and an artist's studio, they would work equally well as a home office, reading room or additional bedroom. Outside, approximately 4,100 m² of rustic land is planted with a variety of fruit and olive trees and includes a functioning well. The property has mains water and electricity, yet with the land, trees and well, it's ideal for anyone keen to live more "off-grid"—growing produce and potentially adding renewable energy sources. Although Almogía's town centre is only about a 10-minute drive, the setting is very remote and wonderfully peaceful—perfect if you crave space and seclusion.
